Brrm Brrm etc.

Yes, it's an automotive client you'd be looking after and yes, I'm too hot and sticky to bother writing a decent advert but come on, you know the drill.

To be fair, these types of roles don't come around often so this is a great way to 'accelerate' your career. (that's the level to expect today).

Why is it different?

Well for a start you're the lead client liaison, so you no longer have to filter your thoughts and ideas though someone else who will take all the credit in front of the client.

We've all worked for that a$$hole person, or maybe you're still working for them.

The thing here is the client is a huge auto brand with a massive portfolio of events and they need your strategic guidance to create an annual campaign rather than individual activations

You'll sit with the client's marketing, content, creative and comms, so your diverse background will really come in handy as the team will want to hear what you have to say and as there's no filter, you can call the shots.

Developing a client relationship built on trust is a big thing here as you'll help develop their ideas and objectives into a comprehensive brief which you can add value to and dissect for the internal agency team.

Internally you'll work with the creative and design team to ensure the project delivers on the client expectations and fingers crossed, exceeds them.

Overseeing the project and delivery team is so important and you will have complete autonomy (not a car gag, that's just the word) on direction of response and ultimately execution of the project. .

This agency is one of the largest in the world and have a reputation for excellence.

If you think it's time to set the wheels in motion (last one I promise) and step out of the shadows, drop me a message and let's have a confidential chat. Who knows where it will take you.

Don't worry if your CV isn't up to date, we can deal with that later.

Oh, I also run a £1k recommend a friend scheme, so please feel free to share with your connections.
